SUMMARY REPORT

When people are faced with situations that prevent them from fully exercising their human rights, the right to social security is crucial in ensuring that everyone has their human dignity upheld. The most important social security law in India is the EPF Act. It was passed in order to establish deposit-linked insurance funds, pension funds, and provident funds for workers in factories and other establishments. The expert speaker of the day, Mr. V Gopal delivered special lecture on the topic of 'A Pragmatic Look into the Nuances of the Efficacy of the Employees Provident Fund Act 1952. The speaker covered the practical aspects of implementing the Act. He also discussed in detail the various schemes of available under the PF Act with in depth deliberations on the contribution rates and amounts. The lecture also outlined in detail the coverage of the Act and the non-applicability of the Act. Transfer of accounts, settlements, shifting of amount and overall administration of the Act was clearly discussed in the light of practical difficulties and procedures of grievance redressal. The lecture ended with an interactive question-and-answer session.
